South Carolina Grower Greatly Surprised by the Large Yield. It is quite uncommon to see cotton bolls with more than four or five locks. Bolls with six locks are most uncommon and never before this season have bolls with seven locks been heard of, but they are to be found in many localities. Mr. H. H. Peeples of Savannah, who is engaged in extensive cotton raising in South Carolina, passed through the city en route home after a visit to his plantation in the state across the river, and says that he has found any number of bolls with seven locks full size, with cotton in them. The bolls are very much larger when open than those with the usual number of locks in them.

Mr. Peeples stated that he had been lively the stated that he had been lively and the stated that he had been lively than the stated that he had been lively that he stated t ing on a cotton plantation off and on all his life, and never before did he see such a phenomenon. His attention was called to several of the prodigies by one of his em-ployes, and he had several of the curiosities with him. Mr. Peeples has not changed the seeds he has been using for the past ten years, and attributes the excessive fruitful-ness of the cotton to the good season which has been prevalent. ers in South Carolina had already finished picking their cotton, and but few fields are seen scattered about the state where the cotton has not all been picked, and these in his opinion will be cleaned within ten days. "In all my experience in the cotton-raising business I have never seen a season just like this," said Mr. Peeples. "The seasons have not only been ideal for the growth of cotton, but have kept down the grass and have in no way interfered with the gather ing of the crop. When the cotton season is over there will be less cotton left in the fields in this section to rot. I venture to say, than ever before. The class of staple is the best and the colors are excellent, all of the cotton having been bleached perfectly. "In this section the planters have been most successful, and it is a noticeable fact that the negroes have benefited much by the high price of cotton. They have received good wages for their services, and are now in a more prosperous condition than for years. Many planters are paying 60 cents for picking, and when the last is done it will probably amount to an average of 75 cents, and the average hand can pick 300 to 500 pounds per day."

Mr. Peeples said that on his Carolina early and late crops opened about the same time, he had no trouble in getting it picked. London More Picturesque Than New plantation there was no trouble in securing enough labor and that, despite that the

One reason, I think, why London is so much more striking than New York is in the unbroken line which the irregularly Here is a chance for architecture to extend, while with us it has only a chance to tower, on the short uptown block which is the extreme dimension of our proudest edithe extreme dimension of our proudest edifice, public or private. Another reason is in the London atmosphere, which deepens and heightens all the effects, while the lunar bareness of our perspect ves mercilessly reveals the facts. After you leave the last cliff behind on lower Broadway the only incident of the long straight avenue which distracts you from the varied commonplace of the commercial structures on either hand is the loveliness of Grace Church; but in the Strand and Fleet street you have a succession of edifices which you have a succession of edifices which overwhelm you with a sense of a life in which trade is only one of the incidents. The tremendous volume of life that flows through the narrow and winding channel, past the dim cliffs and pinnacles, and the lower banks which the lesser buildings form, is such that the highest tide of Broadway or 5th avenue seems a scanty ebb beside it. The swelling and towering omnibuses, the buge trucks and wagons and omnibuses, the huge trucks and wagons and carriages, the impetuous hansoms and the more sobered four-wheelers, the pony carts, donkey carts, hand carts and bicycles which fearlessly find their way amidst the turmoil, with foot passengers winding in and out, and covering the sidewalks with their multitude, give the effect of a single monstrous organism, which writhes swiftly along the channel where it had run in the figure of a flood till you were tired of that metaphor.
